Commentary

The Liontrust Select International Alpha Fund returned +1.05% for the month to be +7.72% year-to-date and +16.33% over the past year (net, after fees). The Fund has continued to perform well during the frequent periods of elevated market volatility this year.

US economic resilience continues to persist, although the late cycle slowdown is becoming evident in more recent monthly data. Context is important. Compared to expectations earlier this year (IMF forecasts) the overall economic pulse of the US economy for 2025 appears to be tracking above expectations. While the survey data has been very weak in recent months, this has not transitioned into notably weaker US growth. Further, the sentiment surveys have begun to recover from their lows to reflect the resilient economic data.

With US core inflation remaining near target, there is plenty of opportunity for The Fed to lower the Fed Funds Rate by 25 basis points at the upcoming September meeting to a target of 4.0% - 4.25% (from the current target of 4.25%-4.5%). We anticipate three 25 basis point rate cuts over the coming year taking the Fed Funds rate towards a more neutral policy setting from the current restrictive level.

US aggregate earnings have remained solid with the current US quarterly earnings delivering ahead of expectations as earnings-per-share (EPS) are tracking 10% compared to year ago levels. The EPS momentum has remained robust which has translated into a strong equity market rally in recent months. While some guidance is cautious, the lower Fed Fund rate expectation, corporate tax cuts and ongoing strong AI investment is supportive for corporate earnings going forward. US equity valuations remain fully valued with the P/E multiple well above long run historical benchmarks. However, outside the large US technology companies, valuations are more compelling.

While the EU continues to face ongoing economic challenges, some additional re rating upside is plausible given the more compelling valuations. The fiscal stimulus from the EU government defence spending program combined with the very low 2% ECB cash rate will be supportive.

Globally on the tariff front, the recent bi-lateral agreements with many key economies have given markets some comfort going forward. With all trade negotiations and the complex nature across multiple regions simultaneously, there will be some more bumps ahead. We anticipate some additional volatility going forward however these would be viewed as opportunities to invest.

Domestically, the RBA lowered the target cash rate to by 25 basis points to 3.6% at the July meeting as anticipated. The market expects the RBA to cut the cash rate by another 25 basis points by year-end as investment intentions, and more broadly the private sector, remain weak. However, the RBA will be cautious and is not expected to lower rates substantially lower due to the ongoing large federal and state government spending continues to be the driver of domestic GDP while core inflation remains near the target range.

The Fund is managed by the London based investment team at Liontrust lead by Mark Hawtin (refer corporate bio below). The globally based investment team have managed this fund since January 2023. Over this period the three-year annualised performance has been +12.3% (net, after all fees).
