Commentary

The Select International Alpha Fund returned +0.96% for the month to be +18.1% year-to-date (YTD) and +14.3% over the past year. The large overweight to quality Tech (and AI) this year combined with some targeted short positions have been strong contributors for the fund this year.

The higher for longer cash rate narrative for developed markets is becoming a more consensus outlook. The soft economic landing scenario which has been building momentum in recent months, implies that restrictive rates can remain due to the ongoing resilience of the economy despite the aggressive rate hike cycle. The economic data year-to-date reinforces the resilience of aggregate economic, credit conditions and earnings. Particularly for the US.

Consumer and business sentiment indicators continue to hold up in the US compared to other economies such as China, the EU region, the UK and Australia. Central banks globally, particularly the Fed are well placed to avoid a hard landing. With tighter monetary policy remaining well into 2024, policy makers will be more comfortable that they are doing as much as possible to ensure core inflation moves towards their long-term policy target. Achieving price stability will be a critical objective for central banks and will be supportive for markets going forward.

The weaker economic data pulse in China continued to weigh on market sentiment within the region. This has been a consistent feature as the regular economic data flow reinforces the softer momentum for the second largest economy compared to expectations. Further, high government debt levels and concerns with the property market are key structural headwinds for Beijing. Hence the soft consumer and business sentiment creates additional challenges for policy makers to turn things around.

The Fund is managed by the GAM Investments global equity team who are based in Europe, the US and the APAC region. Their active absolute global investment strategy with a focus on disruptive technology has performed strongly and is well placed to take advantage of any spike in global market volatility. The global Fund overweights to quality Tech (including AI and cloud) have been key contributors to the performance. Overweights are Alphabet (GOOGL), Microsoft (MSFT), Nvidia (NVDA), Uber Technologies (UBER), Netflix (NFLX), Airbnb (ABNB), Salesforce (CRM) and MicroStrategy (MSTR). The Fund remains underweight Consumer Discretionary, Financials and Commercial Real Estate.
